

GREEN VOTER'S GUIDE

November 5, 2019

INDY MUNICIPAL ELECTION

The Green Voter's Guide identifies candidates who accept climate science and believe it's important to do something about it. It represents our assessment based on input from the candidates. Policies, positions, statements and votes are evaluated to identify the "greener" candidate option(s) within each race. Due to limited resources, only major party candidates in select races are evaluated.

Mayor of Indianapolis

Joe Hogsett, D

Accepts climate science and is doing something about it. Has implemented a broad range of policies to conserve energy, save tax dollars and protect our quality of life. Initiated Thrive Indianapolis to build a more sustainable, resilient city and reduce carbon emissions.

Jim Merritt, R

Has a long history of blocking action on climate. Throughout his career in the State Senate, has sided with coal and utility interests and has voted against energy efficiency and renewable energy. Voted against solar for homes, businesses, congregations and municipalities. Voted to phase out net metering, a key financial component for private ownership of renewable energy (SB309).
